WRANGELL, ALASKA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1920

PRICE TEN CENTS

Ernest Campbell And Miss Terry Are Married

MARRIED — Ernest M. Campbell and Miss May Terry at Port Townsend, Washington, on Thursday, September 30, 1920.

The above news came as a most pleasant surprise for it means the addition of another delightful family to Wrangell.

The bride visited in Wrangell the past summer. It was known when she arrived here that she and Ernest Campbell were not strangers to each other, but it was not suspected that they had serious intentions. Miss Terry was regarded as a most charming young lady, possessing the attributes of a true woman, and during her sojourn here she made many friends who will be more than pleased to welcome her when she returns as Mrs. Campbell.

Ernest Campbell has lived in Wrangell nearly all his life, having been brought here by his parents before he was old enough to object. He is a man of exceptional character who is held in the highest respect by every one.

After war was declared in 1917 Mr. Campbell volunteered his service to his country. He was assigned to duty on the S. S. Northern Pacific which sailed from San Francisco to New York via the Panama canal. Upon reaching New York the Northern Pacific was put into service transporting troops. Ernest remained on the big ship until she was wrecked on January 1, 1919. He was then assigned to duty on the S. S. Iowan. A year ago he received his discharge and returned to Wrangell. Although he had been absent from home a little less than two years he returned home with the remarkable record of having made 32 voyages across the Atlantic.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are expected to arrive in Wrangell next week.

The local chapter of the Red Cross have been advised that the course in Home Nursing and Care of the Sick will not be settled until after the 15th of this month when a decision will be made by the chapter jurisdiction for a Field Representative in Alaska in the form of a Public Health Nurse who would represent the Red Cross in general and give the course in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick. The matters of expense as far as the chapter is concerned would be determined by the decision of the Field Representative.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Brandeis of New York arrived on the Hazel B No. 4 this week from a big game hunting expedition into the Cassiar. They have engaged passage to Seattle on the S. S. City of Seattle.

Adjutant W. J. Carruthers last week received a cablegram from headquarters intimating that he and Mrs. Carruthers may be transferred this fall. We know that the people of Wrangell sincerely hope that no transfer will be made.

Mrs. John T. Towers and her mother, Mrs. F. E. Seavey are now settled in the Pritchett house on Cassiar street where they will be at home to friends informally Friday afternoon and evening during their stay in Wrangell.

Parent-Teachers Association

The public is cordially invited to attend the next meeting of the Parent-Teachers' association at 7:30 on Thursday evening, October 14. The following program will be given:

Song—Primary Pupils.
Community singing led by Mrs. W. W. McLaughlin.
"Our System of Grading"—Miss Ann O'Connor.
"Children Who are Not Promoted"—Mrs. O. C. Palmer.
"Is an Education Worth While?"—Mrs. M. O. Johnson.

"The Mooseheart School Republic and the Vocational Training of that Institution"—Mrs. J. W. Pritchett.

Richard Suratt, Alaskan representative of the Fox film corporation, arrived on the Hazel B No. 3 last night. Mr. Suratt went into the Cassiar as far as Cottonwood rapids on Dease river. He obtained some unusual pictures of caribou.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Shields departed on the Princess Alice Thursday evening after a visit of several weeks with their son, Lin Shields who is in the employ of Donald Sinclair. Mr. and Mrs. Shields are residents of Seattle.

Winfield Wood, officer in charge of the U. S. Radio station at Craig, is now in the marine hospital at Ketchikan, will be discharged from the hospital Saturday. He will come to Wrangell and spend a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wood, and sister, Mrs. G. A. Tozier. He will then return to Craig to resume charge of the radio station there.

Samson Leaving for A Visit to Norway

E. Samson arrived from Craig on the Princess Pat Monday night. He will sail for Seattle on the first boat south. Mr. Samson is en route to Europe for a visit to his old home in Norway after an absence of 35 years. After coming to America as a young man he followed mining for some time. Later he came to Alaska and has lived on the West Coast for the past few years. For some time past he has been in the employ of the Lindeberger Packing company at Craig. Mr. Samson says he has made no definite plans as to how long he will remain abroad, but does not think it likely that he will return in less than a year.

Administratrix Appointed

Mrs. G. C. Clark of Ketchikan has been appointed administratrix of the estate of Chief Shakes. Rev. J. S. Clark and Tom Tamaree were originally appointed as executors of the estate. Now that Tamaree is dead and Clark moved away Mrs. Clark has been appointed administratrix by U. S. Commissioner Wm. G. Thomas.

Boat loads of Native delegates will be in attendance from Bayview, Kake, Karheen, Killisnoo, Angoon, Wrangell, Douglas, Ketchikan and Saxman.

Envoy Ed Atkinson, officer in charge at Metlakatla, is making all arrangements for the welfare of the visiting delegates. The town council of Metlakatla and the elders of Father Duncan's Church, are co-operating to make these meetings a success.

C. Hobdy of Honolulu; August Dreier of Honolulu; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Brandeis of Omaha. They took passage south on the City of Seattle.

The game bags brought out by the hunters leaving today are as follows:

G. C. Beckley of Honolulu—one moose, two caribou, one goat, two sheep (one Fanning), three bear.

WRANGELL CHILDREN AT MOOSEHEART

An Address On Mooseheart

Mrs. J. W. Pritchett Talks Interestingly of "The School That Trains For Life."

As previously reported by the Sentinel three of the children of the late Al Osborn were taken to Mooseheart recently. Mrs. J. W. Pritchett who accompanied the children on their journey returned last week. At the request of the officers of the Moose lodge Mrs. Pritchett on Friday evening addressed a Wrangell audience on Mooseheart and its wonderful work. Mrs. Pritchett spoke for more than an hour and was given the closest attention by her hearers. She spoke in part as follows:

"The task which I am called upon to discharge this evening is one in which I feel my heart eloquent and my tongue dumb. Much has been said and written about Mooseheart, but the half has never yet been told. Some of the leading newspapers of America have sent talented writers to Mooseheart for the purpose of writing a story that would describe the institution, and these writers have all confessed that their descriptive power were not equal to the task. It has been said that Mooseheart is not a place, but a state of mind.

The vast estate of more than a thousand acres is not Mooseheart, nor the thousand children, nor the schools, nor the buildings, nor the officers. The real Mooseheart is what the people within its bounds are trying to do. I have brought home with me pictures of magnificent buildings, beautiful lawns and happy children, but the greatest thing of all at Mooseheart is something which cannot be photographed or described in words—it can only be felt by one who has been there—it is the Mooseheart spirit which envelops the institution and is manifested there in every phase of child activity and child welfare.

"Upon our arrival at Mooseheart on the morning of September 3 we were taken first to the Information Bureau to wait until Superintendent Adams who was in conference with some of the Mooseheart governors would be free to see us. I immediately became interested in watching the groups of children playing about the lawns. It was a warm day, and being Saturday all the boys who wished to do so were permitted to go barefooted.

"The children were suitably clothed for play. The little girls were in gingham dresses, but no two were dressed alike. Some of the boys wore dark blouses and overalls. In short, they were dressed just as practical mothers everywhere dress their children for play. They were playing all the usual games that children love. Over on one lawn the children were playing and singing a circle game. Others were using the playground equipment. A group of kindergarten age were occupied with the sandpile. A number of the older ones were playing tennis. They all seemed happy and seemed to be getting along together without the slightest friction. But just as I was reflecting that it could not always last—that a little human nature would be bound to show itself sometimes here as well as elsewhere—two small voices were raised simultaneously in loud lamentation. The matron came out immediately. She settled the difficulty quickly, but with nothing but kindness in her manner. Before going back into the cottage she ministered to a wee one, for it seems that in Mooseheart families, as in others, little people have to be told to use their handkerchiefs.

"Splendid lawns surround the Mooseheart homes; yet I did not see a 'Keep off the grass' sign anywhere, and the children romped and played on the grass to their hearts' content.

"The Mooseheart town is modelled after the plan of a New England village. It is built on the edge of the estate and the farm lands stretch away almost as far as one can see. Two most courteous sixteen year old boys showed me about the town. They pointed out the various buildings, explaining that the larger houses were the first dormitories. They said that plan was soon given up and cottages were being built now where 12 to 18 children with their matron live together in a happy family. The buildings are all of concrete blocks or gray stucco, with red tiled roofs. They are built for permanency as well as for beauty of architecture.

"By the time our little party were summoned to Superintendent Adams' office the children were losing their sense of being in a strange land. Mr. Adams welcomed them with a cordiality and friendliness to which they instantly responded. They were assigned to their receiving cottages and so began life in their Mooseheart home. The first consideration of Mooseheart for the child is its physical care. The children on arrival are kept ten days in a receiving cottage before being admitted to the regular dormitories as a preventive to any spread of a contagious disease to which they may have been exposed prior to their coming to Mooseheart. During this period the children are given an exhaustive physical examination, immunized against diphtheria with toxin and anti-toxin and vaccinated against smallpox.

"A magnificent new hospital has been recently erected and equipped at a cost of $125,000. This was a gift from the Philadelphia Moose lodge as a memorial to those members who lost their lives overseas.

"Dr. John Nichols, who is the Mooseheart Physician-in-Charge, showed me through the hospital. The surgery, sterilizing rooms, X-ray rooms, diet kitchens, laboratories and ample dispensary represent the latest and most advanced ideas of modern science.

"Besides medical attention the new children upon their arrival,

The Great Heart of the Moose Where Children Are Happy

By a Stranger Within the Gates at Mooseheart

OUR first impression as we alighted from the train at Mooseheart, was that of a magnificent country place, sloping down to the winding, tree-mirroring Fox River. Through the lower property about 100 yards above the river, running north and south, is a perfect stretch of concrete boulevard. It is a link in the great Lincoln Highway which stretches from New York to San Francisco. Right opposite this, Mooseheart station; west of this road, the hospitable entrance to the upper estate, is marked by two great stone posts. Here a pleasing sign assures the visitor of a welcome. From this gate an inviting driveway winds up the hill towards the groups of glittering white buildings at the top of the rise. At the right of this drive a picturesque graveled walk keeps company with the road up the hill. The landscape gardening, and the great care devoted to the shrubbery reminds one of the better Long Island or Scottish country estates.

To our right as we strolled up the hill about a furlong back amongst the trees a spacious, wide-siding residence attracted our eye. This, we afterwards found, was the home of Mr. Brandon, Supreme Secretary of the Loyal Order of Moose. As we continued up the hill, the buildings of concrete blocks began to individualize themselves. First, a little information and registry cottage. Pausing here, we were directed to the large Administration building! Here are the general administrative and executive offices of the Mooseheart colony, and here, too, is the wonderful print shop where perfection color presses turn out the great editions of the Mooseheart Magazine.

As we rounded the turn leading to the entrance of the Administration building a stream of happy laughing children were pouring out of a beautiful school building.

Individuality and Self-Reliance

We at once remarked on the individuality of dress and action of these care-free children. There was no sense of the cloistered and molded uniformity, that is characteristic of the beneficiaries of so many charitable institutions. The only uniformity noted was the universal neatness of dress and a remarkable air of self-reliance without over-assertiveness. Very striking too, was the consideration for the opinion of others displayed on every hand. This consideration for others and the thoughtful care with which the older boys and girls turned towards the little tots distressed over a stubbed toe or other minor childhood tragedy, remained as an indelible impression of our visit. This together with the marked individuality of the boys and girls.

The Beginning of Mooseheart

The Supreme Secretary told us the story of Mooseheart—its beginning, its aim and its accomplishments. As this man talked so clearly and convincingly, unconscious of the effect on his hearers, so interested was he in his own subject, the whole Mooseheart idea unfolded before us like a vision. And again we felt that living, vital force—the great heart of the Moose—throbbing with love and sympathy for the orphans and widows.

Briefly, the Mooseheart colony idea for the destitute children and wives of members of the Loyal Order of Moose was conceived by the present Director General, James J. Davis, and his associates in 1912. After a thorough search of the whole United States, the ideal location was chosen on the Fox River, 35 miles west of Chicago and about five miles North of Aurora. Here, one thousand acres were purchased, and in July, 1913, Mooseheart was dedicated.

To understand the remarkable progress of this great work since that date, one must first understand the efficient, executive and governing plans of the Loyal Order of Moose. All executive power is vested in the Supreme Lodge when it is in session every two years. Between these rare sessions, all executive power (not legislative) rests in the hands and hearts of five men, except during the two or three days' session of the Supreme Council which meets quarterly.

In order to still further speed the execution of worthy plans, this Committee has delegated all its power to a committee of three tried and true men. These men, unhampered by red tape, have accomplished wonders. The economy of, both maintenance and construction at Mooseheart shows the perfect utilization of every cent in each member's dollar.

Yes, the Loyal Order of Moose is a fraternal order. The Brotherhood represents with great fidelity a cross section of the United States. The largest percentage of this membership of over half a million are working men from every industry. Like other fraternal orders, the Moose Lodge has a sick and funeral benefit, but its great benevolence is Mooseheart. And it is primarily because of Mooseheart that men in every sphere of life are joining the Loyal Order of Moose. They want to have a part and lend a helping hand to this remarkable colony which is training the coming men and women of America to democracy's ideal—useful intelligent citizens.

Who Are Eligible for Mooseheart Training

Mooseheart welcomes to its general hospitality all dependent sons and daughters of deceased members of the Loyal Order of Moose. Sometimes these children are double orphans; sometimes the mother is living, but cannot provide for her children. In many cases, mothers, too, live in Mooseheart. Wherever practical these mothers are made matrons of the cottages, or are employed in the various departments as their ability allows. There is no limit to the number of children received from one family. The great heart of the Moose is boundless in loving sympathy. We saw many instances of four or more brothers and sisters living in Mooseheart. Except under exceptional circumstances children over 14 years of age are not admitted to Mooseheart as it is the aim of this great home school to graduate all students at the age of 18 or 19.

What the Children Receive at Mooseheart

The bright, happy faces of the children, their spontaneous action show at once that they receive more than just care; they receive loving care. Only loving, understanding hearts could make children so happy as are these Mooseheart children.

Every physical, mental, recreative and social need of the boys and girls is understandingly provided. Unquestionably those who are responsible for the lives of these youngsters see deeply into the heart of the child.

In addition to providing all of the children's recreative and physical wants, Mooseheart also gives them opportunities to make money. They are encouraged to save, so that they may have capital when they graduate. But the natural desire of children to buy pretty things is not frowned upon. Mooseheart has its own department store, confectionery and barber shop. Some of the older boys in dress, in poise and in general appearance compare very favorably with what some may call the more fortunate young men who attend our exclusive private schools. This freedom of choice in the matter of money, is only another instance of the desire to guide but not to hamper the students in the full expression of their individualities and in the strengthening of their self-reliance.

The Physical Needs.

The boys and girls are dressed simply and neatly. There is no more uniformity of dress than there is in a like body of school children anywhere. Self-expression, individuality, is shown in the hair ribbons of the girls, the ties of the boys and in all those little touches that mark the varying types and temperaments.

The food is wholesome, varied, clean and abundant. The milk is from Mooseheart's own fine Holstein herd, and each child may have all he or she wishes. The average of consumption for each individual is a quart a day.

Family Plan of Housing.

The children live in little families according to age and sex. Each family has its own house and its own dining room. This insures the individual a perfectly normal life, a freedom from nervous excitement and a general absence of confusion which would be impossible in a large community house and dining room.

Each house has its matron or mother so each child has individual attention and consideration. The houses themselves are an index of the Mooseheart plan. They are individual in architecture, in plan and in size, and each home has its own name. Exquisite is the only adjective that comes near defining the immaculate neatness of these homes. The older girls have a part in the housekeeping under the guidance of the matron. Thus, before they leave the shelter of Mooseheart, they are practical homemakers and homekeepers.

In our visit to the various cottages from the little nursery dwellings to the homes of the older boys and girls, we were impressed by the great consideration for the right and the respect for the privacy of others. The clothing, the personal treasures and other possessions of each boy and girl was kept in its own place by the owner.

One of the especially attractive homes for a family of older girls was the personal donation of Director General James J. Davis. The charm of this spacious bungalow still remains with us, and after leaving there when visiting some friends in their high rent apartments in a big city, we contrasted their cramped quarters with those of these "lucky Mooseheart girls."

In passing we realize that this individual home idea is a great factor in preventing the spreading of epidemics.

Medical Attention

There is a complete hospital at Mooseheart, and a new and larger one is now being constructed, equipped with the most scientific of modern appliances and laboratories. The doctor in charge of the well-being of the children is not only fitted through training, but by natural sympathy, understanding and liking to care for his people. A man he is, with the ripened judgment of years and the heart of a boy.

Social Life and Recreation

Mooseheart has a beautiful theatre heated in the winter and cooled in the summer by washed air. Here amateur dramatics, vaudeville and lectures are staged for the joy of the children. In Physical development and recreation proceed hand in hand in the well equipped gymnasium.

Mooseheart Band and Orchestra.

It seems that almost everyone at Mooseheart either blows a horn or plays some musical instrument. From this wealth of musical material a band of 50 people has been trained. And such a band—you won't find its equal anywhere in the world. The average age of the players does not exceed 14 years, yet no band outside of Sousa's or Prior's can approach it. In fact, before the armistice was signed Sousa took away all the available boys for his band. We were fortunate in hearing a rehearsal of this wonderful band on the eve of its departure for the East. For so great is the fame of this organization that it is booked for a tour of the Eastern coast, including a special concert for the President. And the President will hear real music for this trained organization is at home in difficult orchestrations as in thrilling popular and material airs. The execution is remarkably clean cut and finished.

It was inspiring to hear this wonderful band, the personnel of which represented nearly every state in the Union and a score of different nationalities, but all Americans in heart and brain. And the audience, boys and girls from every State in the Union, from Manila, Panama and Canada had the typical temperament of their various nationalities but they all sat spellbound under the great thrall of music. Never have we seen a more appreciative, a better behaved audience, yet there was no restraint. The concert concluded by the band playing the Moose Ode and leading the audience in singing.

And again there came to us as we sat in this interested and interesting audience, that sense of an ever present loving, watchful care, the feeling that the great heart of the Moose was there overflowing with kindness and understanding.

Outdoor Recreation and Athletics

No natural, healthy desire is left ungratified. For the wee toddlers there are sand piles, play houses, swings and whirligigs around the nursery. For the older boys and girls parallel bars, flying rings, etc. Then there is a large athletic field with a grandstand. Here is the diamond for the school nine as well as the various "scrub and class teams." Here also is the football field and the running tracks. Although track athletics has only been recently taken up by the Mooseheart boys they have defeated East and West Aurora as well as other big High Schools. One Mooseheart boy has done the 100-yard dash in 9 and 4-5 seconds. That is certainly going some.

The Assembly

At 5:30 every evening in the summer all but the smallest children gather at the athletic field for a general "get together."

Woman

Woman is man's helpmate. She is his better half. She has one more rib than man, so why not? They, as a rule, have a discerning mind, and have a great power for extracting whatever they have in mind at the moment, especially money. Women, as a rule, are faithful to a certain point and from there on, they censor themselves. Man has learned many useful lessons from the Great War, and women have also profited in several directions, notably in clothes reform. Before the war they dressed scantily, but in these days they are to be congratulated if ever-so-thin a covering covers their epidermis.

The college woman of today is no exception to the general rule. They are sometimes thought of as being bashful, but this is only the opinion of outsiders and not those who have an intimate knowledge of college life from within. Codes generally like three things best of all, but they are at all times open to conviction. These most vital things that enter into their lives are: Dancing, Preening, and Joy-rides. The first and second of these need not be dwelled upon, but we can very truthfully lay the emphasis on the last; because perhaps, it is the most vital attribute of general well-being.

In conclusion, we will say that woman is absolutely necessary, not only in the strictest sense of the word, but construed literally. The more there are the merrier. God bless 'em all.—Ex.

Sicilian Vespers Remembered.

In Sicily, on Easter Monday, red roses are worn by all, and houses and churches are bedecked with crimson blossoms. This custom has been kept up annually for more than six hundred years, in memory of the great uprising of the islanders against the French known to historians as the Sicilian Vespers massacre. Tradition has it that a bride on her way to church was insulted by drunken soldiers and that, in the course of the resultant disturbance, she was accidentally killed, the white roses of which her bridal wreath was composed being stained red by her blood. Hence the custom.

Slaves in Abyssinia.

The inhabitants of the Gemira country in Abyssinia are pagans. They appear to believe in a divinity inhabiting the sky—not to be identified with the Wah of the Galla—and also in secondary genii dwelling on the earth. Slavery is not officially recognized, but it exists in fact, though with some extenuation in form. The slave is not free to change his master; he is put in chains if suspected of an intention of escaping; he is beaten if he does not work or march at the will of his master, and he receives no pay. On the other hand, if he can be "presented" he cannot be openly sold, and must be designated gabare (subject) and not baria (slave). Even these differences disappear in distant provinces like Gemira, and in times of disorder. Those who will not submit live as fugitives in the forests.

True law is right reason conformable to nature, universal, unchangeable, eternal, whose commands urge us to duty, and whose prohibitions restrain us from evil. * * * Neither the senate nor the people can give us any dispensation for not obeying this universal law of justice. * * * It is not one thing at Rome and another at Athens; one thing today and another tomorrow; but in all times and nations this universal law must forever reign, eternal and imperishable. It is the sovereign master and emperor of all things. God Himself is its author, its promulgator, its enforcer. And he who does not obey it flies from himself, and does violence to the very nature of man.—Cicero.

In the winter this assembly is held in the theatre. The band plays, of course, and again the children feel the protecting care of the great heart of the Moose when they join in and sing the Moose Ode.

Mooseheart Children Are Strong on Geography

Unconsciously the children learn a great deal about geography at these assemblies and other meetings for when Albert Osborn who has just arrived from Wrangell, Alaska, talks with the boy from Florida they both swap valuable information about the places where they used to live.

Self Government

As we stood on the steps of the theatre after the band concert a single file of seven children passed. Their slow step and sedate demeanor, like that of a cat who had eaten a canary bird, was such a contrast to the children playing about that our curiosity was aroused. "O they are paying the penalty," said the Supreme secretary, and then we gained an insight into the Mooseheart self government.

When an instructor or matron sees a child breaking a rule that child is told to report one, two, three or more demerits depending upon the gravity of the offense. At the assembly Johnny or Susie reports these demerits.

All the boys and girls reporting demerits are then tried by the children in regular form. The evidence is heard, the accused is allowed to present his case, and then from the findings of the jury the court announces the verdict, "Guilty or not guilty." If guilty the penalty is imposed. This penalty is generally a withdrawal of desired privileges for a certain length of time, and stated hours for the "prisoners' march" which we had seen. No matter how we may theorize that results prove or disprove the good of a system, Mooseheart proves this self government a wonderful success.

General Schooling

At Mooseheart they believe in early education. The children start the kindergarten at the age of three. From kindergarten they go to primary school, grammar school and up through the high school. The teaching staff is absolutely the best available, and as the school period is eleven months the progress is very rapid. A Mooseheart boy or girl graduating at 18 or 19 years of age, has a more extensive and much more thorough education than the average high school or private school graduate.

Pre-Vocational Training

In addition to the general school work, the children at about the age of nine are given general instructions in the trades and arts. They practice gardening, carpentry, elementary stages in various trades, in short, feel their way among the different industries. Thus at about the age of 14 years the boy or girl is ready for specialized vocational training.

Vocational Training

There are at least 22 vocational trades and arts offered at Mooseheart. The boy is asked what trade he thinks he would like best, and the same question is put to the girl. From their pre-vocational work, the students are usually fitted to make a choice promptly. But this choice is not final. If the boy or girl after a trial does not prove fitted for that particular vocation he or she may try something else; and if the pupil does not fit here still other tests are made. No pains are spared to find that vocation, which natural liking and aptitude may be best suited for the individual.

When the boy or girl does learn the proper vocation, progress is rapid and on graduation the individual is qualified to take his place with the best in his trade or art.

The actual work the students have done in concrete seems marvelous to an outsider. For instance, the tall pedestals for the boulevard lights are apparently solid granite, but they are really concrete veneered with a layer of cement and granite rubbed to a high polish. Marble slabs for bathrooms, facades for buildings, images that we thought were Parian marble, were all made by a somewhat similar process. Large apartment buildings in Chicago have friezes, cornices, caryatids made by the skilled hands of mere children. Most of the concrete buildings at Mooseheart, including the plumbing, electric wiring, flooring, window casing, are practical demonstrations of students' work.

THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT THOUGHT SO WELL OF THE MOOSEHEART CONCRETE SCHOOLS THAT DURING THE WAR, IT SENT ONE HUNDRED MEN AT A TIME TO MOOSEHEART FOR SPECIAL THREE MONTHS' TRAINING TO FIT THEM TO BE PRACTICAL CONCRETE MEN.

All the trades taught at Mooseheart are up to the highest practical standard. Students in animal husbandry, under instructors, care for the prize dairy cows and the superlatively fine blooded horses, as well as the work teams, chickens, etc. Students of agriculture help sow and reap the harvest. Girls studying domestic science help cook the food, and girls studying dressmaking have plenty of work to do in their line. The designers, the sculptors, modelers, all do practical work—work that is not only used at Mooseheart but by contractors, builders and art stores of Chicago. Great department stores are eager to take all the plaster and marble images made by students at a good price. Some of the most artistic are the work of young geniuses of fourteen years of age.

Fitted for Life

The boys and girls who graduate from Mooseheart need ask no odds of the world. They are superlatively trained in their vocation and are intelligent, useful citizens in every sense of the word. They have trained brains as well as trained hands, and their heart is in their work.

Printers, plumbers, steamfitters, carpenters, builders and big farmers are desirous of the services of the trained Mooseheart young men. Some, ambitious to go from a trade still higher up in the profession, are going to technical colleges to become mechanical and electrical engineers.

The Loyal Order of Moose is Responsible for This Wonderful Work

Mooseheart today has over 760 orphans which it houses, clothes, feeds and trains. The average age of the children is 9½. The average age of graduates is about 18. Some children are taken in their first year and some are even born at Mooseheart. The plant is worth $2,400,000.00. The improvements cost $500,000.00 annually. The maintenance cost is $500,000.00 annually but the work is growing as the Loyal Order of Moose grows.

What it Costs to Be a Moose

This varies somewhat, depending on the expenses of the local lodge. The local lodge is the only variation, however. All other expenses are virtually fixed. Let's take a typical example: A member of Wrangell lodge, for instance, pays $13.00 annually. Of this $2.00 goes to the maintenance and the building of Mooseheart, 30c for his annual subscription to the Mooseheart Magazine and he certainly does get his money's worth here. Thirty cents covers operating expenses of the Supreme Lodge. The remainder is deposited in the Bank of Alaska to the credit of the local lodge to be drawn on for sick or death benefits, and for expense of social activities.

What Benefit a Member of the Moose Receives

He has the fellowship, friendship and the advantages of the social club for his enjoyment. He also has the assurance of $10.00 a week, payable for 13 weeks in case of his disability. In addition, he knows that $100 will be paid to bury him in case of death, but greatest of all is the positive knowledge that should he die destitute his children and wife will be provided for. His wife will live in comfort and his children be given care and a training such as he himself could not provide. Insurance money may be spent unwisely but Mooseheart will care for his loved ones.

The Great Heart of the Moose is Calling Men

Words are poor messengers to carry the call of Mooseheart to man. One must see and hear as we did—to feel as we do. We know that if you visited this wonderful colony as we did, you would feel the great generous throbbing heart of the Moose as we did. We feel that no red-blooded man can visit Mooseheart, see those happy children without feeling that he wants to have a hand and a part in this great work. Though he may not care to take advantage of the lodge or benefit feature; though he does not fear for his own children, the call of the children he sees there, the children of others will pull his heart strings and open his purse. He will feel that he can do no better thing than thus help to ideally democratize and train young America. Truly, the Loyal Order of

Moose is founded on the words of the Master: "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

Can any man resist the call of the children? Does not the heart of every man respond to the great heart-beat of the Moose? FOR THE GREAT HEART OF THE MOOSE IS BUT THE SUM OF ALL THAT IS BEST IN THE HEARTS OF MEN.

The biggest men in this country are realizing that no service has been so productive of definite results and so economically administered as is Mooseheart. And so they are joining the Loyal Order of Moose, they feel with truth that Mooseheart is not only insuring children of individuals, but insuring and safeguarding the productivity—the welfare of our nation. There is no limit to the amount of good that may be done. The scope of Mooseheart is in direct proportion to the number of members of the Loyal Order of Moose. Mooseheart will be five times greater when the Loyal Order of Moose has five times its present membership. The membership now is approaching a million. It should be five, ten or twenty million.

are examined by the Mooseheart dentist and dental service is rendered according to their needs. Dental examination is made thereafter every four months. Everything possible is done to safeguard the health of the children.

"Every child at Mooseheart attends Church. On no other point are the Mooseheart officials more particular than to see that each child receives religious training and is brought up in the faith of its father. Dean Rondthaler speaking on the subject of the religious training of the children at Mooseheart said:

We feel as these children come to us that their fathers who have passed away are calling upon us. "Train up this child for me, as I would have it trained." The father may not have been exactly a member of a Church, but his associations were connected with it, and his wife was connected with it, and we feel that the demand of that father would be that the child be brought up in his faith. And it should be done, according to his wishes, according to faithfulness to his memory. And when a Catholic child is brought here we feel that the voice that speaks from the grave, from under the benediction of the last absolution that is given by the priest at the bedside of the departing brother, should be obeyed and that Father Laffey here should have charge of the religious education of those children whose fathers—or whose mothers as it generally is—have been or are in association with the Catholic Church.

"It was my privilege to discuss Mooseheart at length with two of the governors, and I was amazed at the scope of the work and the remarkable thoroughness with which it is being carried out. As one of them said: 'Mooseheart is a place of ideals—a place that aims at health of body and mind and spirit. As the creation and object of the loyal affections of a numerous and powerful fraternity, Mooseheart is bound to teach, and does teach, the sense of belonging to a family, a group, a community. We intend that the children shall absorb into their pores the ideas of brotherhood, friendship and joint action for a common cause, which is the inspiring thought of fraternalism.' As I listened to the governors talk I realized that Mooseheart is indeed fortunate in having for its executives men of such exceptional capabilities and splendid traits of character, who are aroused to a sense of the supreme importance of sending boys and girls out from Mooseheart who shall carry with them honest minds, upright souls, a high love of their country, and a sense of duty to the community into which they are to go.

"The word charity is never heard at Mooseheart. The child is taught that the Mooseheart School-Home is a legacy left him by his father; that by his affiliation with the Moose lodge, his love and his protecting care, is still surrounding his children, though he is gone from this life. "The word orphan is also tabooed, for the Mooseheart authorities ask: 'How can a child be an orphan when he has over 600,000 foster fathers?"

"I once heard a probation officer who was speaking to a Parent-Teachers' association state that over 80 per cent of the juvenile offenders who came into his court were children of one-parent families—that is either the mother or father was trying alone to rear the children. The officer said that this seemed to prove that God Almighty intended each child to have two parents and both of them on the job.

"It was probably with this idea in mind that a women's auxiliary to the Moose lodge was created as one of the Mooseheart Legion units, for Mooseheart needs foster mothers as well as foster fathers.

"After three days spent at Mooseheart I had unconsciously acquired a deeper vision of service, and a broader understanding of the fraternal spirit in which most lodges are organized, but which the Moose lodge in particular emphasizes somewhat in its local lodges, but more especially in support of Mooseheart. I therefore gladly welcomed the opportunity when it was presented to me to be one of a class to be initiated into the Mooseheart chapter of the Women of the Mooseheart Legion. It is a privilege to be a Legionaire, to be identified with an organization whose guiding motive is service to little children who have been deprived of a father's support and care.

"It is a matter of interest to know that the father of the Osborn children paid but $3 in Mooseheart dues after joining the lodge. In return his three dependent children will be cared for intelligently and kindly until they graduate from high school at which time they will be well grounded in their chosen vocation, and will be ready to go out into the world as useful citizens, trained to make a living in one of the skilled trades in case they do not care to further their education by university work.

"But while Mooseheart stands as a model among institutions for children its work is not finished. The men and women in charge are planning constantly and are working untiringly for the betterment of the Mooseheart home and school. They cannot help but know the favorable comment their work arouses, but it is inevitable that they know many weary hours of perplexity when they need to be conscious of the support and loyalty of every Moose and Legionaire. They need to know that back of them stand the entire Moose membership in fullest accord and sympathy with Mooseheart aims and ideals.

Mrs. Pritchett has been asked to give a talk on the Mooseheart School Republic and the Vocational Training of that institution before the next meeting of the Parent-Teachers' association.

OUR REASON

More than half the space in this week's issue is devoted to Mooseheart. Never before in the Sentinel's history has so much space been devoted to a single subject in one issue. But we trust that under the circumstances our readers will not feel that they have been treated unfairly.

When Al Osborn passed away four children were left without either father or mother. The case was all the more pathetic on account of the children not having a known relative in the world.

Everyone in Wrangell was interested in the welfare of the Osborn orphans, and when it became known that they were to be sent to Mooseheart hundreds of questions were asked concerning the institution. In the two articles published in this issue will be found the answers to many questions that have been asked.

What is said in praise of the Moose lodge is not intended to detract one iota from either of the other two splendid fraternal organizations that are represented in Wrangell.

The school has acquired an organ which has been placed in the primary room.

The regular meeting of the Redmen's lodge Tuesday night was followed by an enjoyable smoker.

The world's largest user of the purest and best maple sugar offers you the new Karo Maple

A rare and delicious syrup at a moderate price. Don't worry about the high price of maple syrup. Of special interest to every mother

When you wonder how the new Karo Maple gets its delicious tang of rich maple syrup remember—

The makers of Karo Maple use annually over a thousand tons of the purest and best flavored maple sugar from the finest maple groves in Vermont and Canada.

This is one reason why over five million cans of Karo Maple were purchased by American housewives last year.

This is a greater sale, by far, than any kind of maple syrup offered.

The moderate price of Karo Maple is also an attraction—it costs less than any other syrup of approaching quality and flavor.

Go to your grocer today and get a can of Karo Maple, in the GREEN CAN.

Compare it for price and flavor with other maple syrups. If you are not satisfied your grocer will give your money back.
